The suspect entered the Chase Bank approached an employee near the front entry doors, ordered her towards the back of the bank, and ordered the employee to unlock a door which provided access to the teller line. When the employee didn't open the door fast enough, the suspect ordered her to climb over a desk, and followed her while pointing a handgun at her, with his finger on the trigger guard. Once behind the teller line, the suspect ordered the two tellers and the employee to the vault, and instructed one of the tellers to access the vault's locked drawers. The suspect handed one of the tellers a backpack which he brought into the bank, and instructed her to fill it with money. When she didn't move fast enough, the suspect fired one round into the carpet inches from her feet. The suspect ordered all of the employees into a bathroom, and fled the bank on foot.
